Daniil and Vanya

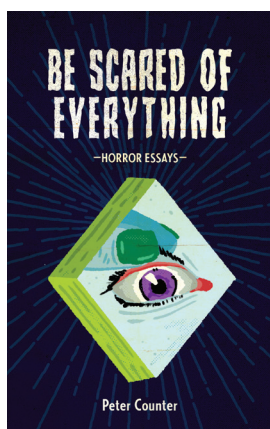

Marie-Hélène Larochelle; translated by Michelle Winters

We Need to Talk About Kevin meets Goodnight Mommy in this outrageous modern family thriller: A successful young couple from Toronto whose comfortable life is gradually destroyed by a mysterious set of twins they adopt from Russia.

Marie-Hélène Larochelle is Associate Professor at York University in Toronto; Daniil et Vanya (Québec Amérique, 2017) is her first novel. Michelle Winters is a writer, painter, and translator; her debut novel I Am a Truck was a finalist for the 2017 Scotiabank Giller Prize.

Be Scared of Everything: Horror Essays

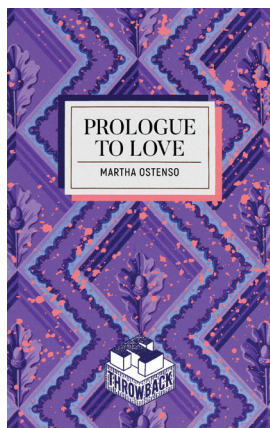

Peter Counter

Slinging ectoplasm, tombstones, and chainsaws with aplomb, this essay collection is a frighteningly smart celebration of horror culture that will appeal to both aficionados and casual fans. This book shows us that horror—from Pokémon to ghosts to PTSD—can be just as honest, vulnerable, and funny as it is scary.

Peter Counter is a prolific television and video game critic, originally from Toronto, who writes about culture and technology in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Prologue to Love

Martha Ostenso; new foreword by Hannah McGregor

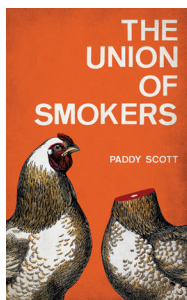

What if the children of star-crossed lovers actually dealt with their families' troubles? Originally published in 1931, Prologue to Love is a lush portrait of early 20th century BC ranch life, and an intergenerational tale of love and loss—and hope and redemption.

Martha Ostenso is the author of one book of poetry and sixteen novels, of which Wild Geese is the best known.
